Failure as a learning tool

MINDSET

Fixed Mindset

- Talent is more important
- Failure is a stigma
- Task and environment dependent
- Avoids challenges
- Gets disturbed by the feedback
- Hides or shies away from effort

Growth Mindset

- Process is more important
- Failure is a part of the game
- Process dependent continuous small steps
- Takes challenges
- Learns from the feedback
- Doesn't shy away from effort

Cognitive Dissonance

The mental discomfort that results from holding two conflicting beliefs, values, or attitudes. People tend to seek consistency in their attitudes and perceptions, so this conflict causes feelings of unease or discomfort.

"A foolish consistency is the hobgoblin of little minds, adored by little statesmen and philosophers and divines."

- Ralph Waldo Emerson
